

Episode 1: Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus

Men and Women behave differently when they communicate with others or express themselves. For instance, women like to talk a lot, but men prefer to speak briefly and to the point; women like to ask questions, but men usually hum and haw in response; women like to talk to someone when they are upset, but men prefer to remain in his cave to figure things out. It is such a pity that women often don't understand this is how men communicate. They tend to feel uneasy about their husbands coming home after work without saying anything and unwilling to share his feelings with her. Often a wife keeps asking questions and thinks that this is the way to connect with her husband.

Some may expect their husband/wives, having learned the differences between the two sexes, will understand better what they think and want and make compromise. As a matter of fact, the main purpose of learning the differences between the two genders is to attempt to accept your husbands/wives as who they are, and understand that your differences are "complementary" and help make a perfect match for achieving synergy.
